

LOCATE STOLEN JEWELRY

RECOVERY OF PART OF PROPERTY TAKEN FROM CONVENT.

Members of Police Force Endeavor to Apprehend Perpetrators of Robbery in Georgetown.

Scattered on the ground in the rear of St. Joseph's School building, adjoining the Georgetown Convent, where money to the amount of $300 and jewelry valued at between $1,500 and $2,000 were stolen late Friday night or early yesterday morning, the police found a number of articles of jewelry yesterday afternoon. When the report was made yesterday morning it was thought that the jewelry taken was worth only several hundred dollars, but later in the day the sister superior reported to the police additional property missing.

Capt. Schneider and Policemen Davis and Grove of the 7th precinct and Detectives Pratt and Howlett of the headquarters staff are engaged in the investigation. It was while they were searching the grounds about the convent for clues that Policemen Davis and Grove found the jewelry thrown away by those who committed the theft. They also discovered a bunch of keys, which they think may prove to be an important clue.

List of Articles Stolen.

The sister superior furnished Inspector Boardman with a list of the missing articles, which includes fourteen rings, a number of chains, rosaries and other articles, as follows:

Gold band bracelet, marked "Lecolier," lady's ring, set with three emeralds and a pearl, valued at $25; one gold necklace, pearl heart attached, valued at about $25; lady's emerald diamond ring, Tiffany setting; lady's diamond ring, five stones, one-half carat in center, others smaller; lady's ring, emerald in center and one-quarter carat diamond on either side; lady's ring, with five pearls and eight diamonds, valued at $50; long, old-fashioned red gold chain, with a square knot lock attached, plain on one side and raised flowers on the other; gold neck chain, with gold cross attached; gold bracelet, with five gold links attached; several of them marked "Laura"; 1 1/2 gold band bracelet, one gold stickpin (lady's knot), with small diamond in the center; one amethyst ring, one gold watch safe with initials in monogram, "P. R. G."; one three-stone diamond ring, engraved on inside, "To Laura from Papa"; one amethyst rosary, one small ruby ring, lady's solitaire diamond ring, Tiffany setting, valued at $30; lady's pearl ring, valued at $12.50; one round hand bracelet, valued at $2; long gold fan chain, set with six small pearls, valued at $25; one small gold ank bracelet, with string of small amethysts attached, valued at $30; one pearl ring, valued at $25; one brown pearl ring, valued at $25; gold link bracelet, valued at $30; pearl necklace, valued at $50; plain gold band bracelet, valued at $10; one ring, set with two small diamonds and one emerald, valued at $10; one gold band bracelet, valued at $5; one gold band bracelet, valued at $5; one seal ring, letter "R," valued at $5; and one neck chain, with five pearls attached, small diamond in center of each, valued at $15.

The jewelry was the property of students at the convent, and part of the money also belonged to them. Most of the money was in envelopes, and a number of the envelopes, minus the money, have been found in the yard in the rear of the convent.

Was an "Inside Job."

It was stated last night by the police that the robbery presented every indication of having been what they term an "inside job." They do not believe that the person who committed the robbery gained access through the window opening on the street, although it is stated that a window was found unfastened yesterday morning about the time the robbery became known. The finding of the keys, the jewelry and the envelopes upon the school property, the police think, strengthens their theory of the affair.

Detectives and policemen are still working hard to solve the robbery. Printed lists of the articles reported to have been taken have been prepared and sent to the police and pawnbrokers in the different cities in this section of the country, although the police do not believe the robber has left the city.

IN THE STORES

PARKER, BRIDGET & CO. announce their autumnal fashion exhibit of gowns, wraps and millinery, opening tomorrow and continuing Tuesday and Wednesday. This assemblage of dress elegance consists of the most exclusive styles from Paris, Berlin, Vienna, London and New York. The firm's representatives having spent many weeks in the fashion centers of Europe making collections for this notable fashion event. It will be an exhibit in keeping with this firm's policy of providing the best that the world produces for women whom nothing less will satisfy, as well as garments and millinery less expensive in fact, though distinctively smart and exclusive.

The "PHILIPSBORN" autumn opening occurs tomorrow and the following days of the week.

It is an event which should be of interest to every well-dressed woman in Washington. A style exposition in ready-to-wear garments and millinery that brings together the best ideas of foreign and domestic fashion designers for the inspection of the women of this vicinity.

Twenty-three stores in various leading cities of the United States comprise the "Philipsborn" chain—and in all of them women's ready-to-wear outer garments is the one and only line handled.

In addition "Philipsborn" foreign offices are established in all the leading fashion centers of the continent, from which the newest styles are immediately shipped to America as fast as they appear.

The inexpensiveness of some of their most charming styles is a revelation to those women who are unacquainted with the immense savings in cost of production that can be accomplished by twenty-three big stores working together.

S. KANN, SONS & CO. have an announcement of wool dress goods that should call the attention of every woman who is keeping up with the latest in new colors and weaves. The "Delius" broadcloths that are advertised in the new shades, "smoke," "pale" or purple, and the "russet" browns, appear to be the very latest word in fashionable wool fabrics and are priced remarkably low for such handsome qualities.

A tremendous sale of black silks that is on the bulletin for tomorrow will no doubt create a wide ripple of excitement in the feminine portion of Washington's buying public. The price of silk is 10 per cent higher than last year, and yet the prices quoted upon the silks advertised by this firm tomorrow are even lower than those for which the same kinds sold last year.

The big sale of "sample" hats that has been continued from Saturday over until tomorrow will attract a great many to this firm's millinery department.

Also tailored suits at one-third under price is another interesting notice that will catch the eye of the woman who wants her dressmaker or tailor, and also wants a stylish suit at a reasonable price. That is what is claimed for the suits advertised by this firm tomorrow, and one feature of particular note is that there are only one or two of a kind, which makes the styles practically exclusive.

Turning from the subject of clothes to that of household fittings, the big bargains in curtains, portieres, couch covers and draperies will appeal to those who are thinking of getting the house ready for the fall and winter season, and those who are just starting to housekeeping, as the savings possible in buying tomorrow are given as decidedly important.

of "Specials" which are the bargains dotting the completed gathering of autumnal winter stocks. The list of wool dress goods, silks, linings, trimmings, laces and sewing needs is a very good one, judging by today's Palais Royal page. The news of coats, gloves, fitting union suits, dainty lingerie and stockings also reads well. Suits and coats that were the inspirations of the New York makers of man-tailored suits are quoted among tomorrow's "Specials," and doubtless there are not a few real "gems" among these samples. It is claimed that at least a half dozen of them are from the famous tailors of Berlin, Paris and London. Children's warmer outer garments are also included among tomorrow's "Specials," and mothers thus find interesting reading on today's Palais Royal page. The millinery news is of best untrimmed hats and ostrich feather plumes, at prices that should create a furor. Trimmed hats, the patterns used by leading New York milliners, are also among tomorrow's "Specials." Gloves, neckwear, jewelry, bags and belts, in all the new phases for autumn-winter, are to be learned of, and in not a few instances at prices surprisingly little. The housekeeper learns of unique one-of-a-kind pieces of furniture, artistic draperies, pictures, as well as the more practical beds and bedding, china and glassware, kitchen utensils, etc. All are included on today's Palais Royal page of "Specials."

MAYER & CO. call attention this week to a sale of mattresses made of the purest cotton felt, every mattress having a large opening which, when unlaced, shows of what material the interior is composed. The "McDougal" kitchen cabinet is another special feature. In this cabinet may be grouped all the articles used in the kitchen, all within easy arm's reach, saving time, trouble and steps. Other attractive offerings include bamboo tabourets, clothes trees, sectional bookcases, sewing machines and dining tables.

GOLDENBERG'S announce an important underprice sale tomorrow of all-wool Smyrna rugs which, it is said, offers economies that no careful spender can afford to neglect. It is explained that the sale prices are fully 25 per cent less than regular, and are made possible by a large purchase direct from one of the leading rug mills in the country at a figure far below their real worth. It is mentioned that the collection includes all-wool Smyrna rugs of every size from the small "Raven" shoes for men and the "Wl-modau-sis" and "Washington Belle" styles for women.

R. RICH'S SONS are continuing their informal exhibit of footwear. The elegance and exclusiveness of the styles and the extent of the variety prove that the house is carrying all the correct fashions in footwear for weddings, receptions and evening wear, as well as for business and street wear and for the home and the school.

Kills Brother Playing Highwayman. OXFORD, Pa., October 5.—Playing highwayman, Harry Kauffman, aged thirteen years, accidentally shot and killed his nine-year-old brother, Edward Kauffman, near Nottingham yesterday afternoon. The elder boy had won the revolver as a prize for ringing a can at the recent Oxford fair, and although not allowed to have any cartridges, managed to procure a number of them. Yesterday Harry went to meet his brother coming from school and playfully pretended to hold him up. In some manner the revolver went off, the bullet penetrating the brain. He lived but a short time. The coroner found that the shooting was accidental and exonerated the elder brother from all blame.
